

Once upon a time, there lived a cat named Leo. But Leo wasn't just any ordinary cat—he was a special cat who loved to bake! Every day, Leo would put on his apron and chef's hat and whisk and stir away in his kitchen.

One sunny morning, Leo woke up craving something sweet and delicious. He flipped through his recipe books and found the perfect recipe for waffles. "Today, I'm going to bake waffles!" Leo shouted excitedly.

Leo gathered all the necessary ingredients: flour, eggs, milk, and a pinch of salt. He mixed them all together in a large bowl until the batter was smooth and creamy. Then, he poured the batter into his waffle maker and waited patiently for them to cook.

As the delicious smell of waffles filled the air, Leo's friends began to gather around his kitchen. "Wow, Leo! Those waffles smell amazing!" said his friend, Mousebeard.

Leo smiled proudly as he served everyone hot, crispy waffles with syrup and fresh berries. Everyone enjoyed the waffles so much that they couldn't stop eating them.

After they finished, Leo's friends thanked him for the delicious treat. "Leo, you're not just a great baker, you're also a great friend," Mousebeard said.

Leo beamed with happiness. He realized that sharing his delicious waffles with his friends made him feel even better than eating them alone.

The moral of the story is: Sharing with others brings joy and strengthens friendships.
