Once upon a time, in a big green forest, there lived three animals who loved to play music. There was Terry the tiger, Melody the monkey, and Benny the bird. Terry played the drums with his strong paws, Melody played the piano with her nimble fingers, and Benny whistled sweet tunes with his beak.

Every day, they met in a forest clearing to play music together. The other animals loved listening to their songs. They tapped their feet, swayed to the beat, and sometimes even joined in with their voices.

One day, an old wolf named Grumpy came into the forest. He didn't like the cheerful atmosphere and decided to stop the music. He snuck up on Terry, Melody, and Benny while they were practicing and told them to stop making noise.

But the three friends didn't want to stop playing. Instead, they came up with a plan. Terry roared loudly, scaring Grumpy away, while Melody and Benny played their music even louder than before.

Their plan worked! Grumpy covered his ears and ran off, leaving the forest once again filled with happy music. The other animals were so grateful to Terry, Melody, and Benny, thanking them for saving the music in the forest.

The moral of the story is: If we work together and stand up for what we love, we can overcome any obstacle. So let's keep making music and spreading joy everywhere!
